

What if this was nothing more than stroke of luck. What if our paths collided by accident. What if the heat was just imagination. What if we were not made for each other, not meant to last forever. But how could I let you go when part of me is always yours.