

What if I would have been nicer, if I would say right thing in the right place. What if I would have been prettier, if I would have been flawless. What if I would have been always there for you, never let you down. What if I would have built a dream house for us, I would never left from your side, giving you undivided attention. What if I have made you the center of my universe, drowning you in to the kisses, showing you my unconditional love. What if all my actions and words would have been real. What if I would have been the One, would you have forgive everything.
